Communication Devices

AbleNet's AAC products are used by millions of people worldwide with a variety of medical and developmental conditions. From children with developmental language disorders, to individuals with severe physical disabilities that limit speech, AbleNet communication devices are available in a range of sizes and features.

When choosing a device, consider how many messages will be required, what access methods will be used, and whether the device is for a single person, or a group environment. For example, a strategically placed BIGmack® may be used by multiple users in a group home for reliably identifying shared needs. Meanwhile, a SuperTalker™ will grow with a child as his or her communication needs change over time.
